

Curricular Adaptations & Play-Based Behavioral Interventions for Children on the Autism Spectrum

Sacramento, CA ♦ Jan. 31 - Feb. 1, 2008

Doubletree Hotel Sacramento

Thursday, January 31

Replays: A play-based technique for treating challenges of emotional and behavioral regulation, with Karen Levine, Ph.D. and Naomi Chedd, LMHC

Replays is an innovative play-based technique for addressing behavioral challenges for children on the autism spectrum as well as children with other developmental disabilities. Learn to support the child in playful, highly positively charged re-enactments of challenging everyday events, incorporating the child's own intense responding. Children become desensitized to trigger events, form new emotional memories, and often, substantial behavioral improvement results. The workshop teaches the technique, illustrated through extensive use of video clips with a broad range of children and challenging behaviors.

Friday, February 1

Curricular Adaptations, with Patrick Schwarz, Ph.D.

Considering the specific learning and support needs for students with autism spectrum disorders (ASD) in the inclusive classroom, participants of this workshop will learn processes to adaptively personalize and improve the quality of educational settings.

Included will be how to provide rationales for curricular adaptations, differentiated instruction and universal design in the general classroom, how to set up an IEP-at-a-glance tool for supporting students, how to orchestrate a planning process so student needs are creatively met in a quality fashion and ideas for differentiation and universal design.
